

Erin Bailey joined RIF in summer 2021 as the Director of Programs and Content. Her role includes serving as the subject matter expert and developing, curating, and managing content for educators and families. Erin has been an educator in U.S. and international classrooms for over a decade. Her teaching experience includes classroom teacher, Literacy Specialist, and English Language Development Specialist for grades PreK-8 as well as a university instructor. Erin is a qualitative researcher who utilizes wearable video cameras and walking methodologies. Her studies include interdisciplinary literacies in outdoor learning spaces, arts-based education in museum spaces, literacy teacher education, and social movements. She has presented her research at several major conferences including the American Education Research Association and OMEP World Assembly and has been published in Qualitative Inquiry and Journal of Early Childhood Literacy.